

Part C Five Year State and National Summaries of Dispute Resolution Data
Prepared by CADRE February 2011
 Dick Zeller, Senior Policy Analyst, CADRE

Last updated 4 February 2011

This document summarizes the third through seventh years (2004-05 through 2008-09) of national dispute resolution data collection that began with the Part C Annual Performance Reports (APRs) submitted March 2004.

This Summary of contains 15 one page summaries of data that states/entities submitted as Table 4 (Part C) in their Annual Performance Reports for 2004-05 and 2005-06, and, more recently, as Section 618 reports submitted by each state 2006-07, 2007-08 and 2008-09 data. Each page in the summary contains the numbers of dispute resolution events reported from fifty-six (56) states/entities for each year in each of three required dispute resolution reporting areas (current Table 4 form and Instructions are available at: www.ideadata.org/docs/dispresPtC-2009.doc). The bottom of each table includes the national overall rate of dispute resolution events per 10,000 children served nationally (birth through 2). The required data in Table 4 address:

- * Section A: written state complaints,
- * Section B: mediations, and
- * Section C: due process complaints (and resolution meetings for states adopted Part B due process complaints timelines and procedures).

Formal dispute resolution activity in Part C is far less frequent that under the school-aged, Part B program. The total number of due process complaints reported nationally in 2008-09, for example, is about 1% of the number filed under the Part B program for that year. In fact, each of 11 states reported in 2008-09 more Part B due process complaints than the total Part C due process complaint activity for that year.

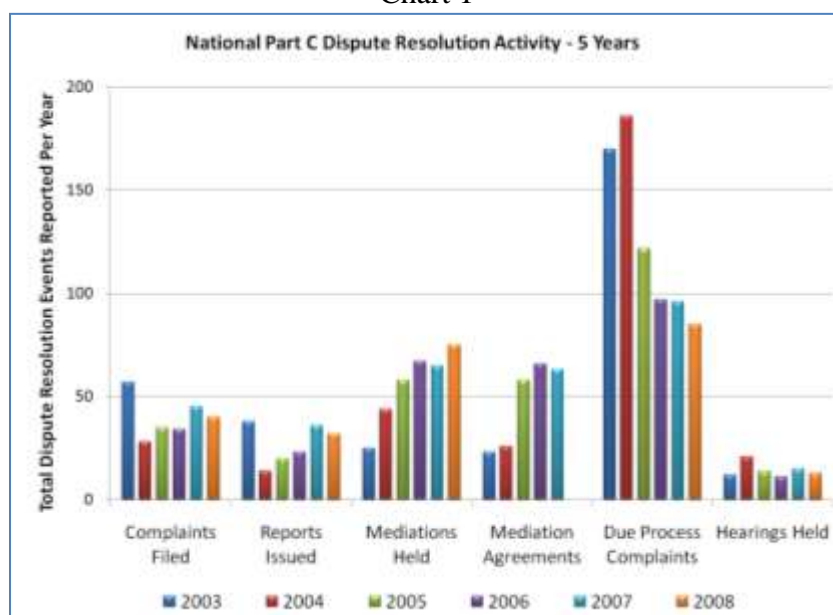

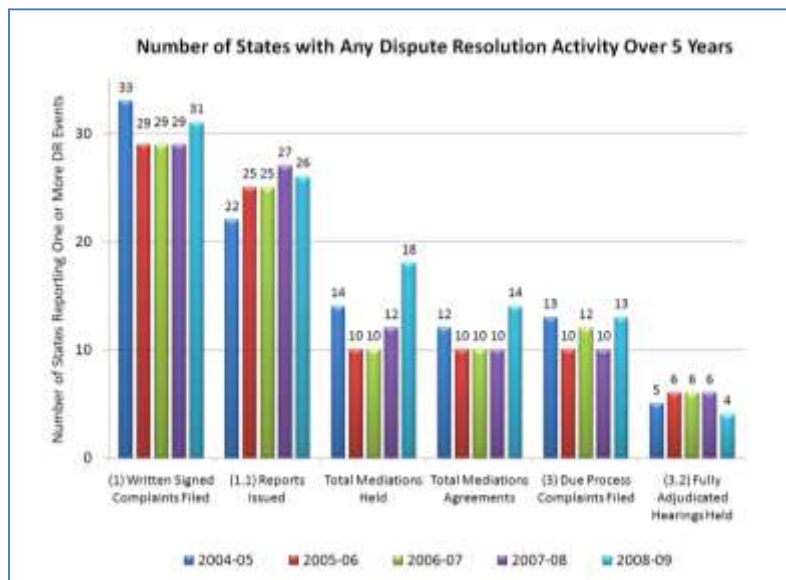

Chart 1 above displays the total national numbers for major dispute resolution events under Part C. While due process complaints and hearings held have decreased somewhat over these five years, there have been increases in the use of written state complaints and mediations. It is worth noting that mediations in the Part C program are relatively more frequently used than under Part B. This may be in keeping with the inherently collaborative structure of the Part C program.

Chart 2 below shows the number of states that reported one or more dispute resolution events in each year indicated. While written state complaints are used in more states than either mediations or due process complaints & hearings, it is also clear that many states each year have none of these events.

Three large states (California, New York and Pennsylvania) accounted for about 90% of the total due process complaint activity nationally over these five years, while these same states accounted for only about 25% of either total complaint or mediation activity.

In general, Part C programs have a record of parent-provider collaboration through early resolution efforts, either involving effective use of the Individual Family Service Plan (IFSP) or through other active attention to parent concerns as they arise. Those interested in strengthening Part C early resolution efforts in their states may benefit from reviewing the APR summary chapter published July 2010 (particularly the final two pages) and available at: <http://www.directionservice.org/cadre/SPPAPR2010DRindicatoranalyses.cfm>
